Where Can the Imagination Take You?

This spring, the NCCCinephiles bring you three movies that celebrate the imagination in different ways. If a filmmaker can dream it, then so can you.

The Iron Giant (Brad Bird, 1999)

Presented by Bill Blenk

Tuesday, February 13, 5:30-7:30PM, E-142

This directorial debut, from animation legend Brad Bird, who would go on to direct such blockbusters such as Pixar's The Incredibles and Ratatouille, tells the story of a young boy and the sleepy fictional town of Rockwell, Maine, who are suddenly jarred by the visit of a mysterious stranger during the height and tension of the Cold War in 1957. Although initially a box office flop for Warner Brothers Studios, this critically acclaimed film, based on the 1968 British novel The Iron Man by Ted Hughes, has gone on to become a cult classic and one of the most highly praised animated films of all time!

Orlando (Sally Potter, 1992)

Presented by S.V. Buffamanti

Friday, April 12, 12-2PM, E-142

Working closely with the incomparable Tilda Swinton (The Chronicles of Narnia, Snowpiercer, Doctor Strange) Sally Potter adapted Virginia Woolf's epic fantasy about a Renaissance man who lives for hundreds of years, waking up after a long nap to find that he is now a woman. Few epic films in the twentieth century address gender and art so frankly, yet the highlights involve the balance of wit and wisdom and the noteworthy filming on a budget that bear comparison to the effects in Citizen Kane.

Saving Mr. Banks (John Lee Hancock, 2013)

Presented by Nancy Knechtel

Wednesday, April 24, 6:30-9:00PM, via Zoom

<https://zoom.us/j/3343424695?pwd=MmRVd3pHbG1zYUFsZjRKNzNBcVh4Zz09&omn=91704266399>

Meeting ID: 334 342 4695

Passcode: DISNEY

What goes into the creation of a classic film? Walt Disney, played by Tom Hanks, made a promise to his daughters that he would obtain the movie rights to Mary Poppins but needs to negotiate with the difficult author, P.J. Travers (Emma Thompson). Directed by John Lee Hancock, the film is a behind the scenes look at the creation of this classic childhood movie at the Walt Disney Studios.
